Before You Start...

I will have a few questions for any prospective student on their first lesson. It doesn't matter if they have experience or not. Answering these will make their life as a student easier, as well as your life as a parent.

1. What are you trying to accomplish? Why do you want to learn piano?
2. What is music to YOU? Your answer to this question speaks volumes. Don't look it up in a dictionary; I want YOUR definition.
3. What do you want to sound like? I will ask you to name the name of an artist or style to give me some idea on this. This will help with goal setting and for me to set a curriculum. The more specific you are the better. I personally suggest bringing an audio recording as well.

These are all questions I will go over with you during your first lesson. Each student is their own individual, and will have different answers for each question. If the student is very young, their parent may need to assist their child in creating their answers. They don't have to be written down, though if you are older it will help to clarify your own thoughts on the subject.

As always, if you have any questions you may feel free to contact me using this site.
